The Role of women in society

Nowadays the world is pushing towards greater equality between men and women. Women are taking up responsibilities and key positions which in the past were referred to as a man's job. In my opinion the woman does belong in the kitchen as a housewife and also in the family as a caring mother but her role in today's modern society is even greater.

Firstly, women are the main household maintainers. Their role in the family is even bigger than the one men have. They take care of the children and do all of the household chores. Moreover, despite doing all of these things women still manage to go to work and earn money for their family.

Second of all, in the last hundred years women's role in society has grown a lot. Women wish to be less involved in household management and child care and are striving to be more involved in modern social life. They are occupying key positions and are working on equal terms with men. Women are better at multitasking whereas men are more successful in linear processes aimed at a narrow goal.

To sum up, I think that the role of today's woman is changing tremendously. Not only should we see women as good housewives and caring mothers but we should also see them as strong empowered characters whose role in today's society is becoming greater and greater.
