

It was a rainy day at school...

Each of the children were tired, including John, who had stayed awake the whole night to study for the upcoming test..

When John went to school, he was getting bullied as usual. Everyone was laughing at him like usual. But this day was different. The rest of the children started punching him for no reason and yelling at him that he's a nobody, and that he's going to be a loser for the rest of his life, alone and unwanted.

And, above everything else, he had a math's exam that he had to take. He couldn't write or think because he was hurt.

"This day couldn't have gone worse!", he thought.

When he started writing for the test, he was falsely accused of cheating by another student and sadly, the teacher didn't believe him, so he failed the exam. He was also threatened that he had to repeat the whole School year again.

On the way home the bullies caught him again, they broke his umbrella and he had to go home through the rain.

When he came home, his parents lectured him and shouted at him for hours when they found out he had failed the test.

John was very sad and exhausted so he went to bed, thinking about the most awful day of his life.

And then, he woke up, and it was only midnight...it was the same nightmare from last week.

When it is difficult for us, we must ask for help. It is very important to offer help and ask for help. We must learn to be better and be friends with each other.
